THE CONFERENCE IS CO-FUNDED BY PROJECTS WITHIN THE 7TH FRAMEWORK PROGRAMME OF THE EUROPEAN COMMISSION

» INVITATION

October 2014 sees the 4th International Conference on Managing Urban Land taking place in Frankfurt am Main, Germany. The conference programme illustrates the global importance of reusing derelict, abandoned and underuse land in order to support the wise and perhaps even sustainable future of our cities. Working with friends from European Commission funded projects GLOCOM, Greenland, TIMBRE and HOMBRE means we can cover the social, environmental, economic and political aspects of managing urban land in depth. For most people the term 'brownfield' raises images of derelict factories, abandoned train stations, or closed mines. But brownfields are also sites of opportunities: the empty spaces in the land use puzzle can help us deliver the sort of cities we are trying to create. Increased understanding of how redevelopment affects city systems now means we can make better use of increasingly scarce financial and physical resources. Therefore, we invite you to Frankfurt between 14 – 16 October 2014 for three days of knowledge sharing, mutual inspiration and scientific validation of experiences from around Europe and beyond.
